

Contemporary Arab Thought and Culture

Dr. Rana Zaher

Course Number: 702.2137

Class Time: TBA

Class Location: TBA

E-Mail: ranazaher@gmail.com

Course Description:

This course offers an interdisciplinary overview of the central aspects of contemporary Arab thought and culture. Based on academic research, textual and media resources, and literature from both the Arab world and elsewhere, we will survey several fields relevant to the understanding of the contemporary Arab world's cultural, social and political affairs. More specifically, the course will offer academic readings and discussions into the Arab world's historical backgrounds, political agendas, gender issues, identity issues, language varieties, and probable future socio-political scenarios. The course will present ample educational opportunities and experiences that promote analytic skills and insights into another culture and its complexities.

Course Content:

This course presents 6 interrelated generic topics, and 2 classes (approximate to semester's length) will be designated for each topic. The topics and their specifications are detailed below:

1. History:

The Arab world map, the Arab League, the emergence of Islam, the Arab identity before and after Islam, the rise and fall of the Islamic empire, pan Arabism and pan Islamism.

2. Gender:

The status and challenges of Arab women in the 22 Arab countries, prominent Arab women, the secular Arab feminist movement, the Islamic feminist movement, and the Tunisian experience.

3. Theory and Thought:

Orientalism as a cornerstone theory to the post-colonial studies, Edward Said's argument about the relationship between east and west, and Bernard Lewis 'critique of Orientalism.

4. Language and Identity:

Linguistic characteristics of MSA-Modern Standard Arabic (as compared to English), the International Phonetic Alphabet (IPA) of MSA, non-linguistic characteristics of Arabic: religious and national symbolism, and borrowing and codeswitching among speakers of Arabic.

5. Religion, Nationality and Identity:

Palestinian Arabs in Israel

Christian Arabs in the Arab world: status, challenges and identity.

Druze in the Middle East: status, challenges and identity.

6. Patterns of Change:

Globalization processes, and The "Arab Spring" revolutions.

Course Requirements:

Since it is an introductory course, there are no specific pre-requisites, and knowledge of the Arab culture or Arabic is recommended but not necessary. Attendance is obligatory for at least 80% of the classes, and active participation in classes are expected. All relevant material and articles can be found in and downloaded from the course Moodle website. All exams are open-book ones. The purpose of the individual meetings is to follow-up the students' progress in their paper work and to provide and open space for them to discuss different paper or course related issues.

Assessment for Regular Students:

Midterm exam: 20 %

Final exam: 50%

Individual meetings: 10%

Paper: 20%

Assessment for Seminar Students:

Midterm exam: 20%

Final exam:20%

Individual meetings: 10%

Seminar paper: 50%

Bibliography

History (Lessons 1,2,3)

Antonius, G. (1939). The Arab Awakening: The story of the Arab National Movement, chapter 1, 13-34, Simon publishers

Craig, J. (1997). What is an Arab? Asian Affairs, 28:1, 38-50.

Mellon, J., G. (2002). Pan-Arabism, pan-Islamism and inter-state relations in the Arab World, Nationalism and Ethnic Politics, 8:4, 1-15.

Sawani, Y., M. (2012). The 'end of pan-Arabism' revisited: reflections on the Arab Spring, Contemporary Arab Affairs, 5:3, 382-397.

Gender (Lesson 4+5)

Badran, M. (2005). Between secular and Islamic feminism/s. Reflections on the Middle East and beyond, Journal of Middle East Women's Studies, 1:1, 6-28.

Bassiouny, R. (2009). Women in the Arab world: framing and background information, Arabic Sociolinguistics: Topics in Diglossia, Gender, Identity and Politics, chapter 4, 133-137, Washington DC, Georgetown University Press.

Moghadam, M., V. (2002). Islamic Feminism and its discontents: towards a resolution of the debate, Signs, 27: 4, 1135-1171, The University of Chicago press.

Orientalism (Lesson 6)

Lewis, B. (1982). The question of Orientalism, The New York review of books, June 24, 1982.

Said, E. (1979). Orientalism: Western Conceptions of the Orient, chapter 1, 1-27, Penguin group.

Lesson 7-Midterm

Language (Lesson 8)

Bassiouny, R. (2009). Diglossia and dialect groups in the Arab world, Arabic Sociolinguistics: Topics in Diglossia, Gender, Identity and Politics, chapter 1,9-26, Georgetown University Press.

Mahfoudhi, A., Everatt, J., & Elbeheri, G. (2011). Introduction to the Special Issue on Literacy in Arabic. Reading and Writing: An Interdisciplinary Journal, 24, 1011-1018.

Identity: (Lessons 9,10,11)

Amara, M. & Schnell, I. (2004). Identity repertoires among Arabs in Israel, Journal of Ethnic and Migration Studies, 30:1, 175-193

Dana, N. (2010). Druze Identity, Religion – Tradition and Apostasy, Shanaan,. Accessable at: <http://app.shaanan.ac.il/shnaton/15/14.pdf>

Horenczyk, G., & Munayer, S., J. (2007). Acculturation Orientations Toward Two Majority Groups: The Case of Palestinian Arab Christian Adolescents in Israel, Journal of cross-cultural psychology, 38:1, 76-86.

Horenczyk, G., & Munayer, S., J. (2014) Multi-group acculturation orientations in a changing context: Palestinian Christian Arab adolescents in Israel after the last decade, International Journal of Psychology, 49: 5, 364–370.

Rouhana, N. (1989). The Political Transformation of the Palestinians in Israel: From Acquiescence to Challenge, Journal of Palestine Studies, Vol. 18, No. 3, pp. 38-59 .University of California Press on behalf of the Institute for Palestine Studies

Lessons 12- Review and summary

Lesson 13-Final exam

This syllabus is subject to change at the discretion of the lecturer.